

Section 13: Introduction – A Summary of the Buddha’s Forty-Five Years of Great Service to the World

In this section, we present a summary of the Buddha’s forty-five years of dedicated service to all beings, aimed at alleviating their suffering. Based on information from the Tipiṭaka, it is challenging to reconstruct an unbroken sequence of events from the years he spent proclaiming the Dhamma for the happiness and welfare of many. Therefore, we have compiled key events from this period into a series of subsections, each focusing on significant aspects of his life and teachings. These subsections will include important Dhamma messages and sermons, milestones in the expansion of his dispensation, his extensive walking tours, the locations where he spent the rainy seasons (vassa), and other noteworthy events.

The Buddha the Fully Enlightened Oneⁱ

Vassa (the Rainy Season Retreat)

Vassa refers to the three- to four-month rainy season in ancient India, during which members of various religious sects would retreat into forests and hermitages for seclusion, ceasing their travels. During this time, their lay followers provided them with essential food and other necessities. The Buddha endorsed this longstanding tradition and encouraged his disciples to observe Vassa in a peaceful and disciplined manner. The rules for observing Vassa are explained in detail in the Vinaya Piṭaka.

Age of 35 to 80 years

This series covers the period from the Buddha’s enlightenment (Sambodhi) at the age of thirty-five to his passing (Parinibbāna) at the age of eighty. According to scriptures and tradition, the Blessed One, guided by his boundless compassion (mahākaruṇā) and loving-kindness (mettā), travelled tirelessly from village to village, town to town, and province to province across the northern and eastern regions of ancient India (then known as Jambudīpa). He delivered sermons, offered advice, and provided guidance to people from all walks of life—kings, ministers, householders, wealthy merchants, the poor, including beggars, as well as criminals such as robbers. Regardless of caste or status, he showed all the path to liberation.

Major States of Ancient India During the Time of the Buddha

During his missionary journey, the Blessed One travelled extensively across most of the sixteen great provinces (then called Mahājanapadas) of ancient northern India. To better understand the historical context, it is helpful to refer to a modern map based on scriptures and ancient texts. The map below highlights the major provinces (or kingdoms) and important cities that existed before and during the time of the Buddha. Below, we have compiled information about these regions from scriptures and other sources.

Other sources:

The Mahājanapadas (solosa janapadas- see the map below) were sixteen kingdoms and aristocratic republics that existed in Ancient India from the sixth to fourth centuries of BCE...Two of the Mahājanapadas were most probably gaṇasaṅghas (aristocratic republics), and others had forms of monarchy. Ancient Buddhist texts (like the Anguttara Nikaya) make frequent reference to sixteen great kingdoms and republics that had developed and flourished in a belt stretching from Gandhara in the northwest to Anga in the east to Asmaka in the southern part of the subcontinent. They included parts of the trans-Vindhyan region, and all had developed prior to the rise of Buddhism in Ancient India. ⁱⁱ

The sixteen provinces of India during the Time of the Buddha ⁱⁱⁱ

“ In this regard, the following is outside the central Ganges plain: In the eastern direction there is a town called Gajāṅgala, with another town called Mahāsālā just after it. Beyond it is outside the central Ganges plain. On the near side of it is the central Ganges plain. In the south-eastern direction there is a river called Sallavatī. Beyond it is outside the central Ganges plain. On the near side of it is the central Ganges plain. In the southern direction there is a town called Setakaṇṇika. Beyond it is outside the central Ganges plain. On the near side of it is the central Ganges plain. In the western direction there is a brahmin village called Thūna. Beyond it is outside the central Ganges plain. On the near side of it is the central Ganges plain. In the northern direction there is a mountain called Usīraddhaja. Beyond it is outside the central Ganges plain. On the near side of it is the central Ganges plain”^{ix}.

Boundaries of the Middle Country (Majjhimadesa)

The Middle Country (Majjhimadesa), primarily located in the central Ganges valley, had well-defined borders as described in ancient scriptures. Below is a simplified overview of its geographical boundaries:

- Eastern Boundary: The easternmost point of Majjhimadesa was marked by the market town of Kajaṅgala. Beyond it lay the city of Mahāsālā, and further east were the outer boundary regions of the Middle Country.
- Southeastern Corner: The Sallavatī River marked the southeastern boundary. Beyond this river, the territory extended into regions outside Majjhimadesa.
- Southern Boundary: In the south, the town of Setakaṇṇika was the last settlement within the Middle Country. Beyond it lay the boundary regions that were considered outside its domain.
- Western Boundary: The westernmost point was the brāhmaṇa village of Thūna. Beyond this village, the land was no longer considered part of Majjhimadesa.
- Northern Boundary: In the north, the boundary extended to the slopes of Usīraddhaja mountain, which is believed to correspond to Usiragiri, a mountain located north of Kaṅkhal in Haridwar, Uttarakhand. Beyond this mountainous region lay the territories outside Majjhimadesa.

These boundaries defined the region in which the Buddha primarily travelled and taught, a land considered sacred as the birthplace of enlightened beings and the cradle of the Dhamma.

x

Ancient Kajaṅgalā a market town situated 100 km south east of City of Champa and 80 km from city of Bhaddiya : current name is Kankjol, a small village in Sahibganji district in Jharkhand, it situated 18 km south of Rajmahal (a subdivisional town of the Sahebganj district) right on the Indo-Bangladesh border. The Indriyabhāvanā Sutta (MN:152) also mentions that on one occasion the Buddha was staying Kajangalā in a grove of mukhelu trees. In AN10:27 sutta mentioned an event occurred during the time of the Buddha was dwelling in Kajaṅgalā, Bhikkhuni Kajaṅgalā, delivering a discourse to some lay people from that place. In the Milinda-pañha, Kajaṅgalā is described as the birth place of Nāgasena Thero. AN10:27 & AN10:28 give some information of the Buddha staying at Kajangalā.

Some more information of boundaries of Majjhimadesa:

Following source says this about the boundaries of Majjhimadesa:

“The boundaries of Majjhimadesa (Madhyadeśa) or the Middle country have been referred to and explained in both Brahmanical and Buddhist literature of an early date. Thus as early as the age of the Sūtras, we find, in the Dharmasūtra of Baudhāyana, Āryāvarta or the country of the Aryans (which is practically identical with the country later on known as Madhyadeśa) described as lying to the east of the region where the river Saraswatī disappears, to the West of the Kalakavana or Black Forest (identified with a tract somewhere near Prayāga), to the north of Pāripātra and to the south of the Himalayas.”^{xi}

Places Where the Buddha Resided During the Rainy Seasons

To provide updated information on the locations where the Buddha spent the rainy seasons during his lifetime, we have primarily referred to the following ancient texts:

Source 1: Madhurattavilasini nama- Buddhavamsatthakatha of Bhadantâcariya Buddhaddatta Mahathera: Translated by I. B. Honer, 1946.

Source 2: Jinacaritaṃ: The Life of the Victorious Buddha: Original Pali Poem by Venerable Medhankara Thera: Edited and translated by Anandajoti Bhikkhu.

Next is section 13.1 where we will focus on the first year of the Buddha’s life after his enlightenment

End Notes: Section 13-Introduction

ⁱ AI generated image

ⁱⁱ Source: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mahajanapadas>

ⁱⁱⁱ Source: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mahajanapadas#/media/File:Mahajanapadas_\(c._500_BCE\).png.png). Attribution to the author: Avantiputra7.

^{iv} “ Most of these states are located in the Indian subcontinent, but Gandhāra and Kamboja were in the northwest, corresponding to parts of modern Pakistan and Afghanistan”, see: AN: Note: 483.

^v Source: Geography of Early Buddhism by Bimala Churn Law: Chapter 1

^{vi} DN: 33 (Sangiti Sutta) described who are the unfortunate or fortunate people born in middle country who would enhance in Dhamma.

^{vii} Source: Geography of Early Buddhism: Chapter 1: Majjhimadesa or Middle Country- <https://ancient-buddhist-texts.net/Reference/Geography-of-Early-Buddhism/01-Middle-Country.htm>

^{viii} Source: <http://wiswo.org/books/footprints/>

^{ix} VP: Mahavagga: Cammakhandhaka: 12, Theravāda Collection on Monastic Law translated by Bhikkhu Brahmalī.

^x Some of these places are mentioned in: 1) Divyāvadāna or “Divine Tales” : a Sanskrit anthology of 38 tales of Mūlasarvāstivāda Vinaya 2) Geography of Early Buddhism by B. C. Law.

^{xi} Source: Geography of Early Buddhism: Chapter I: Majjhimadesa or Middle Country: <https://ancient-buddhist-texts.net/Reference/Geography-of-Early-Buddhism/01-Middle-Country.htm>